Internet Terms of Service and Privacy Policies

The Prinz Law Office's Internet Practice Group routinely advises entrepreneurs, start-ups, small businesses, and established companies on drafting appropriate terms of service, privacy policies, acceptable use policies, and other online terms and policies for their businesses. In general, the clients who hire us for this type of drafting project are still in the process of creating their business and business models, so our lawyers are often starting from a completely blank slate in developing a business model-appropriate terms of service and privacy policy for a business. However, in other cases, the clients may have been in business a while and have de facto terms of service and privacy policies but have never created the appropriate documents to fit their businesses. Whatever the circumstances of the client, the firm is highly experienced at evaluating the clients needs and creating terms of service and privacy policies that fit that need.

The Internet Practice Group's experience includes representing clients in drafting Internet terms of service and policies across a variety of industries, including but not limited to the following:

- Internet Retail Industry;
- Adventure Travel Industry;
